Members of the Senior Class

To understand American ideals and American institutions; to realize that we are members of a social order and that as a result of this membership we have duties and obligations which, as responsible citizens, we must discharge; to seek after truth; to be tolerant of one another's ideas and beliefs; to think for ourselves, not accepting ready-made opinions; to seek after high achievement, not content with mediocrity; to aspire to high ideals; to know that true happiness comes from service and to seek to serve with unselfish devotion; to desire character more than wealth and happiness more than fame—these are some of the ideals which West High School has endeavored to cultivate in you.

The problems of the world today demand the clearest thinking and the highest intelligence. The need today and tomorrow is for leaders—men and women who have the ability to labor and to inspire in others devotion to causes. The present generation looks to you for the leadership of the future. As you leave West High School may it be with the resolve that you will continue to prepare to take the places of the leaders of the present day.

I congratulate you upon the splendid achievements which you have already accomplished. We are proud to have you take your places among the loyal alumni of West High School, knowing that you will measure up to our hopes, our aspirations and our expectations.

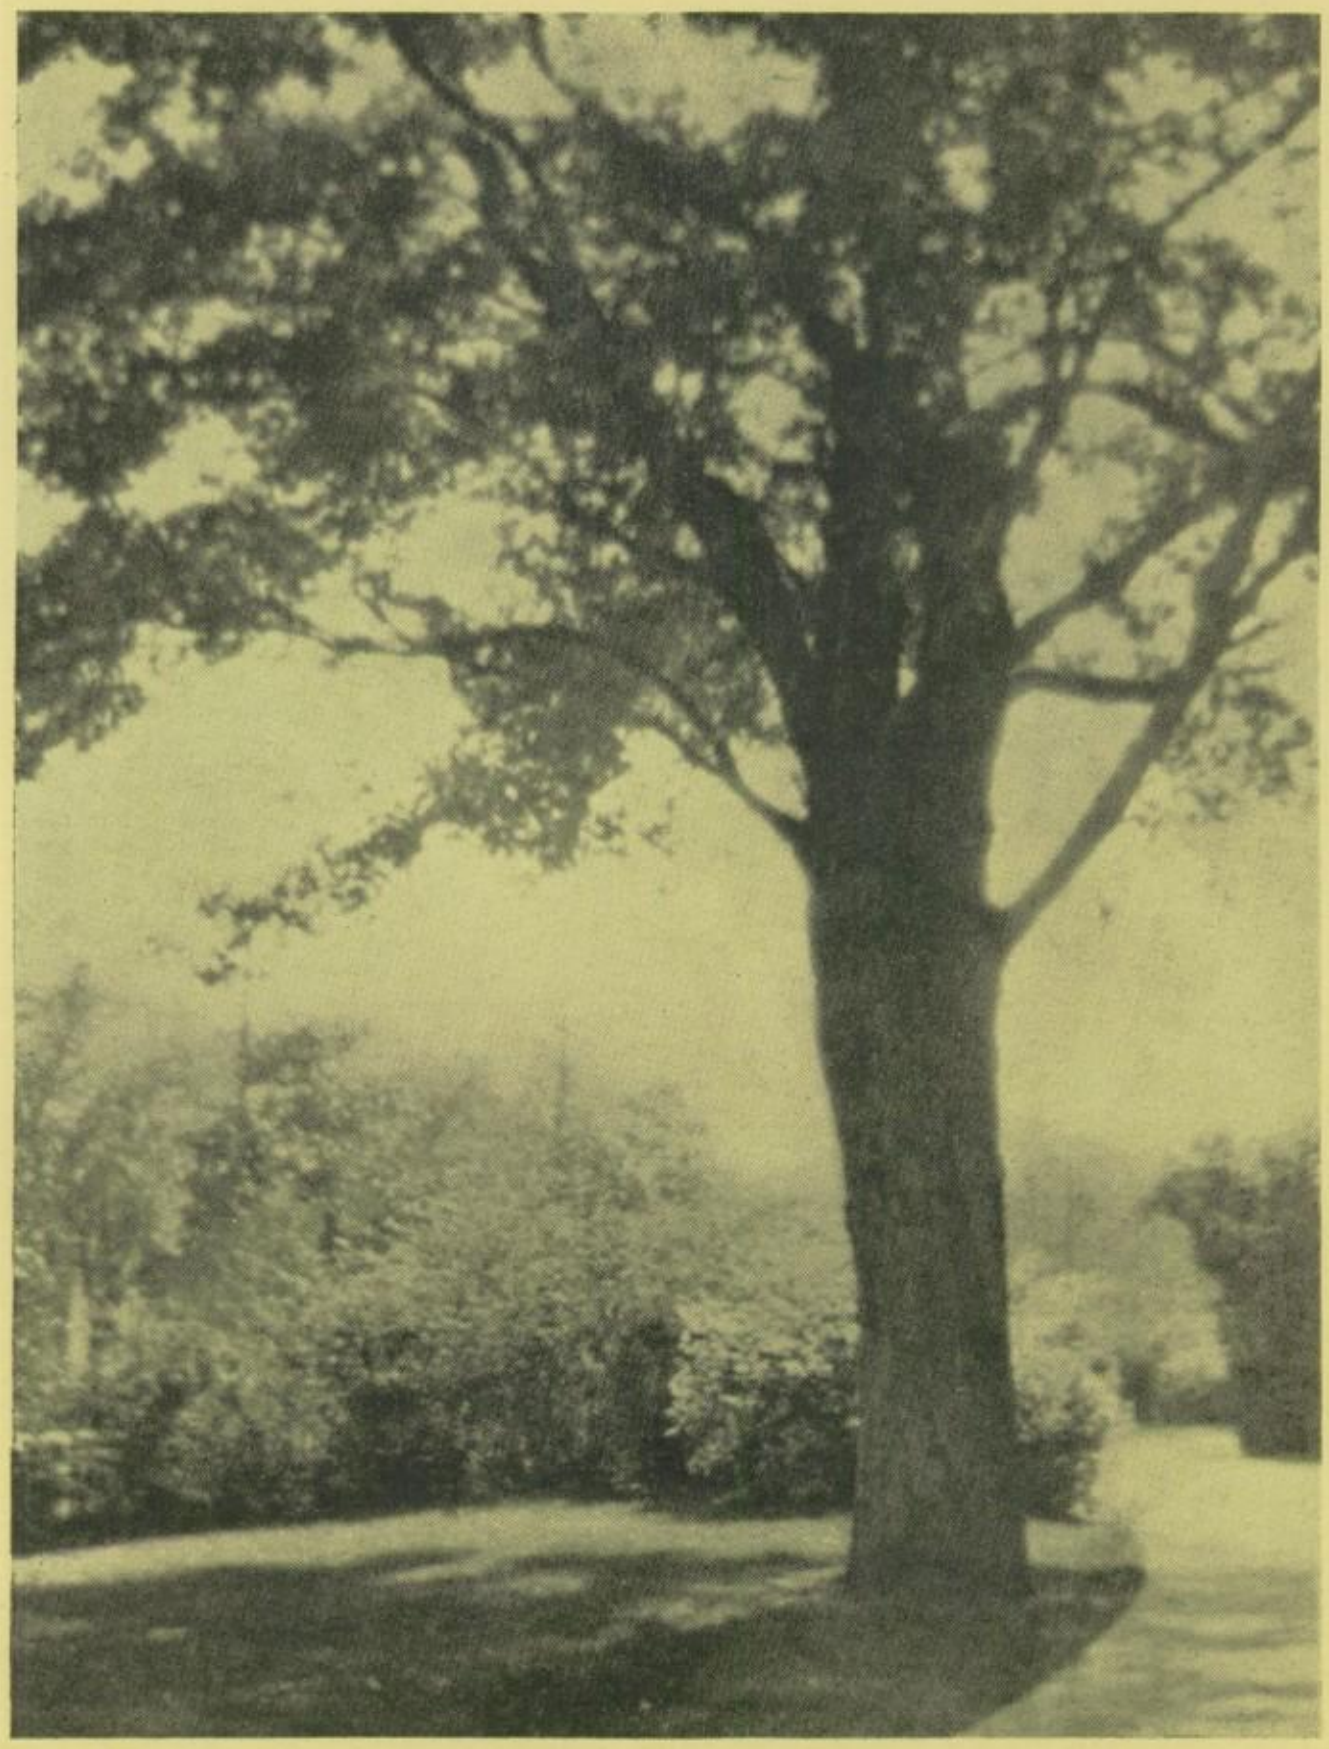
Charles W. Boardman.

THE GREEN AND WHITE

Oh colors gaily showing
In vict'ry or defeat;
The Green and White is blowing
A thousand strong to greet.
A thousand greet the banner
With cheers of dauntless zest,
Uphold its priceless honor,
And hail the flag of West.

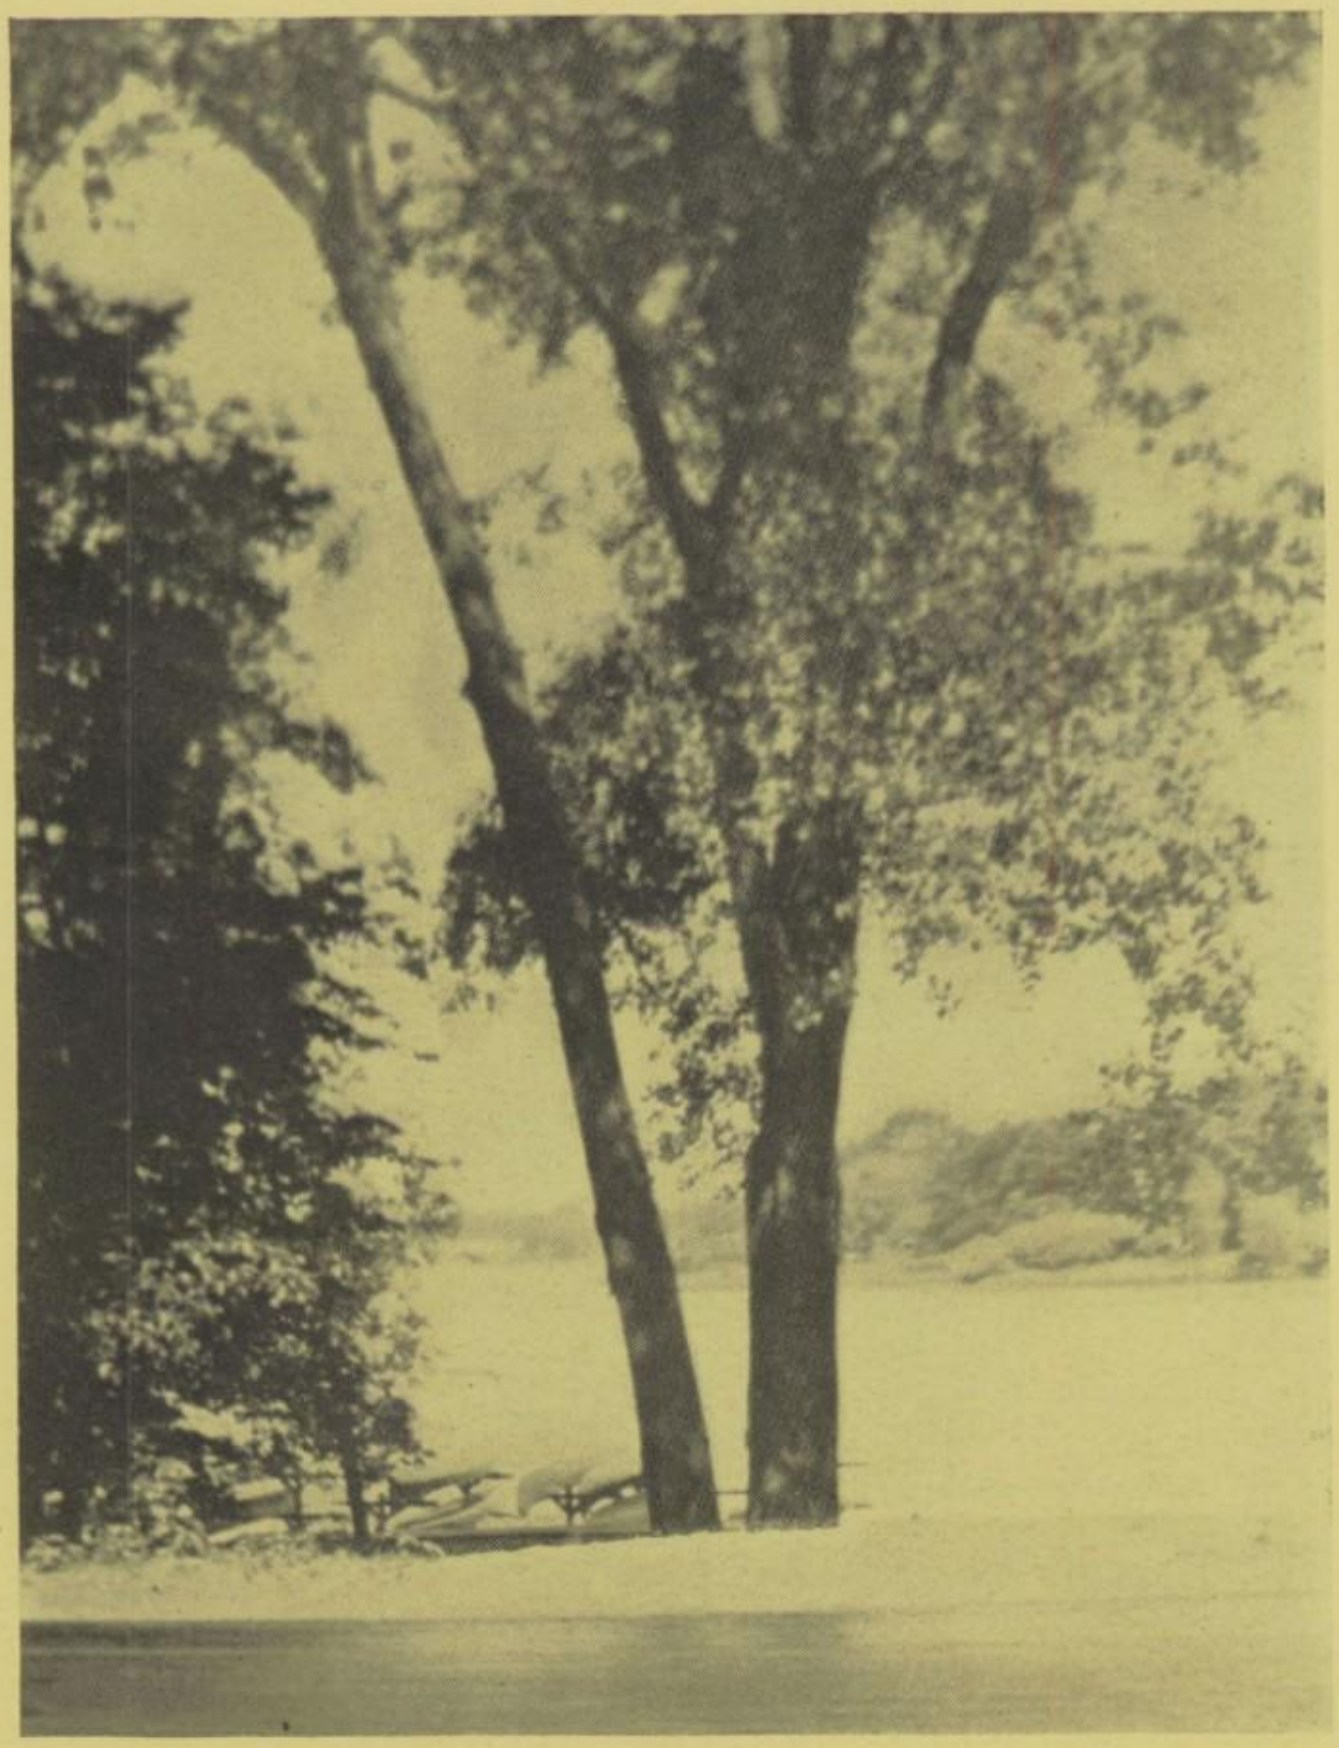
The green that waves so cheer'ly
By Minnesota rills,
The white that mantles yearly
Our Minnesota hills,
Have joined in league forever
To stir in every breast
Pure zeal and true endeavor,
When waves the flag of West.

Let us hail dear old West High
In truth and loyalty!
We shall march in one procession
When the Green and White we see.
We shall proclaim thy victories
Wherever we may be!
Hats off to West High!
Oh, dear old West High!
We are always proud of thee



CANTABILE

The thousand feet that pace this quiet walk are now in school,
The birds sing out a jargon melody to thrill some fool
Who tries his best to "parlez-vous" a bit
Inside the brick abode,
The goad of knowledge trips that lagging wit
Along the narrow road.



ANDANTE

The painted craft that bloom so flower-like are still,
The trees are waiting, too, for that rare afternoon to thrill
Some gentle landsman who would sit her near
The turf upon the shore,
Despite the jeering of her buccaneer
So brave in deep-sea lore!

ORIENTALE

The white moon rises high, diffuses perfumed light,
The silver willows sigh and sway in mournful ecstasy
For those who write a honeyed theme on "Fudge"
To please an educator,
Or read with sightless eyes—"Barnaby Rudge"
And wish they did not hate her.

LARGO

The fates spin out the glowing thread of life in cheerless weaves,
The writhing trees, in wild macabre humor, shed their leaves.
We toil on minimum requirements,
In deep and dark despair,
Because the world is mad and lacks good sense—
To fail, we do not dare!

SCHERZO

The little birds make melody again at heaven's gates,
The scudding clouds rebuke our former rage against the fates,
We never shirk a lesson any more,
Nor kick, nor scold, nor knock,
Because we would not stay within the door—
Alas! 'til four o'clock!

The Class of December, 1922

As we are about to be graduated, we look back over our record and wonder what we have done to help West win. We see not so many brilliant deeds, but rather, numerous small ones, which build a bigger and better West. When the jazz assembly periods and peppy games are a thing of the past, we shall probably "drop in" once in a while to look on, if only for an old thrill, or to take some little Freshie's seat away.

Because our class was slow in organizing, we had to crowd all our business and pleasure into a few short weeks. The co-operative spirit and loyalty of our small class helped us present successfully, "Come Out Of The Kitchen."

We wish to extend our gratitude to the administration and faculty of West for the training they have given to help us become better citizens.

BERNICE ROTH, Secretary.

ALICE ABRAMS—Lake Harriet . . . U. of M.

The Class of March, 1923

The class of March, 1923, has two distinctions; it is the largest and the last class to be graduated from West High in March.

We started at the first of the year to make our last term at West a worth while one, but we were disappointed, for the School Board dissolved the March Class before we had become fairly well acquainted. However, I do not think anyone regrets having been a member of it. Although our class will be forgotten, we shall never forget the four years we spent at West together.

In closing, on behalf of the class members, I wish to say goodbye to the faculty at West who, with untiring interest, have helped to make us better young men and women to do our part in the world.

The Class of June, 1923

Farewells are always hard!

We, the members of the Class of June, 1923, feel especially blue as the time of our graduation from "dear old West" draws near.

The four years that we have spent here have been busy, happy ones, full of the hard work that makes success. We may justly feel that our class has been concerned in the victories of West in the last few years.

In athletics, our teams have won the majority of the contests and many championships, but the measure of success is not always victory. West teams have sometimes sacrificed that in order to be clean and true at all times. That is real manhood.

Members of our class have been leaders in various activities which make up one of the finest parts of our school life. In scholarship, the primary object of school, the class as a whole has ranked high. The class is especially proud of the members of the Honor Roll.

Although the class was a large one, and coordination was difficult, we feel that as an organization we were successful. Loyalty to the school has characterized every act.

We are grateful now, and deeper will that gratitude grow, to our teachers who have so unselfishly labored to bring forth the best that is in us. We thank them for your untiring efforts and trust that we may live up to those high ideals which they have instilled in us.

Our last wish is for the success of West in the coming years.

MARY CARPENTER

WILLIAM MEILI

The June Senior class met on November 22, 1923, to organize and elect officers. Robert Jacobsen was elected president; Marjorie MacGregor, vice-president; Ruth Keenan, secretary; and George Langford, treasurer. The two members elected to the executive board were Mary Carpenter and William Meili. Although the social functions of the class were limited, because of rules made by the Board of Education, we did have a banquet, class day, and class play; and the B Seniors gave a very successful party for us.

The class of June, 1923, was the first class to give a parents' reception, and it hopes that the future Senior classes will carry out this custom.

Perhaps our most successful undertaking was the class play, "The Admirable Crichton." We gave this play two nights at the Central High School auditorium, and used the proceeds to buy a memorial which will help to beautify the halls of west.

Extra! Extra!

Weekly Editor, Board, and Staff, consent to pose for the Hesp!

See the pretty picture folks. Smile, Al, smile. You want to seem happy even if this business of running the best high school paper in seventeen states and one of the four best in the country is a solemn one.

So yelleth the unawed newsboy, who does not realize that these are the people that got out the Extra the day West won the Football Championship; that these are the people who sent seven more delegates to the Central Interscholastic Press Convention than any other Minneapolis School; that these are the people that boosted for the successful Better West Week. But, most ferocious reader, he will stop his nonsense when he realizes that the Weekly's first and last aim is to represent West and do all possible good for her.

GEORGE LANGFORD ..... President

The Upper Class Advisory Committee was organized for the purpose of increasing the co-operation between students and the faculty; it hopes to promote a spirit of democracy, and to help the school in any other way possible. One of the aims of the committee is to bring about such a distribution of the activities as will make possible a greater participation of activities on the part of the student body.

Because of its youth as a leading faction in the school activities of West, it will need the support of the student body and the faculty members. The committee will serve as a mouthpiece for student and faculty opinion on school improvements, and will endeavor to push forward these improvements to its best ability.

The representatives of the various classes will do their best to make this committee a success and we feel sure it will become one of the leading organizations of the school.

Perhaps some one new to West High School, on seeing one of our posters on the bulletin board, would ask, "What is the U. C. Club?" The answer would be. "It is the most active and effective organization for girls in the school." Every Junior and Senior girl is wanted in the Club, and that there are a great many of them in it this year is shown by the membership list which totals more than two hundred.

One of the activities of which we boast, is the Big Sister movement. When freshmen girls come to West, the U. C. Club tries to help them and make them feel at home by appointing a U. C. girl to each one of them to act as a big sister throughout the year. This year we started off with a very successful party for both big and little sisters. This, however, is not the only thing we have done.

If some of our alumnae should come back, they perhaps wouldn't recognize the girls' rest room, for this year the U. C. Club installed a new rug, a mirror, running water, and an electric light.

Another place that has felt the U. C. Club's help is the front hall. We contributed to the fund for making it more attractive by raising money in various ways. We gave several well-supported candy sales, a sunlight, and a "birthday party."

All through the year the regular meetings with good speakers and the holiday parties with lively programs and dancing have kept the members interested. Altogether, we feel that we have had a very successful year and hope the work of the club next year will be carried on even more successfully.

Although the Ace's Club is still in its infancy as a club, no one can estimate its far-reaching influences. It was founded in May, 1920, by a far-sighted group who felt a great need among West students. This need was for a club to foster not only athletics, but also cooperation and good-fellowship among the students.

Perhaps the biggest undertaking of the Aces this year was the paper sale conducted for the purpose of collecting funds for a trophy case. The school supported this campaign so well that it has been possible to make arrangements for the purchase of the case. This case will be placed in the alcove in the lower front hall.

Very successful Sunlight dances have been held in the girls' gymnasium under the auspices of the club.

The club has an active membership of twelve. To be eligible a man need not necessarily be a "Letter-man," but must be one who is working for the best interest of West High.

The cooperation of the student body in the past is greatly appreciated, and it is hoped that we shall continue to receive the support of the school.

"A few Sarah Bernhardts, lots of Marie Dresslers, some Mark Antonys, but no Douglas Fairbanks," is an expression applied to the Marionettes in past years, which might well characterize our present group of West High dramatic enthusiasts.

However, when the club took in its ten new members last fall, it was so pleased with the ability displayed at the tryouts, that it was encouraged to present "The Florist Shop," and "The Loving Cup." These plays were very successful and added approximately sixty dollars to the club treasury.

The money from these plays was added to the money saved from the club dues for the purpose of buying seven screens to be used as backgrounds. The Club of 1922-23 takes great pleasure in claiming the distinction of procuring these much desired screens which have been so much in demand for our own auditorium, in presenting short plays.

During the spring term, a committee was appointed to select a suitable name for the club. This committee passed a resolution to the effect that the name, "Dramatic Club," should be dropped for "Marionettes."

The past year has been most successful for the Glee Club. Through the efforts of our new directors, George C. Kreiger, Floyd Chandler, T. P. Giddings, C. W. Boardman, and T. P. Gruwell, Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, "The Mikado," was successfully staged on February 8th and 9th at Central High Auditorium.

A spring concert was given by the Glee Club, and the annual party was held in March for Glee Club and Orchestra members. The entertainment consisted of dancing and special numbers by members of the two organizations.

On January twenty-seventh, the Glee Club sang from station WLAG. We had the honor of being the first High School Glee Club in the Northwest to broadcast an opera.

All members appearing in a Glee Club production must maintain the standard of scholarship. The school can depend upon the club to assist in any movement for the betterment of West.

Orchestra

The West High Orchestra can be considered one of the most interesting and instructive organizations in West.

Under the new instructor, George C. Kreiger, the orchestra has gained rapidly from the setback it received when it lost ten of its most seasoned players last June.

At the present time, it can be greatly improved by the students of West who have enough school spirit to come out and lend their talents to the school. We are decidedly lacking in cellos, basses, drums, oboes, and French-horns, while we have a profusion of violins and saxophones. Not wishing to drop any of the latter, we must supply enough of the former to keep the balance even.

The orchestra has been busy with the following music:

Light Cavalry
William Tell
La Traviata
The Caliph of Bagdad
La Paloma
Anvil Chorus
Schubert's Serenade
Mikado
Zampa
La Dame Blanche

"Where can I find the West High Library?"

"To your left," answered the student whom I had accosted.

I followed directions and entered the large, sunny room in the front of the building. I was immediately surprised and pleased at the evident quiet and serenity of the room. Every student seemed to have something to do and was bent upon accomplishing his task. There were two or three students collecting the library slips and at the same time hushing the whispers of a few careless pupils. I asked one of the girls how the library was conducted. She informed me that an organization made up of Juniors and Seniors called the Round Table, with Miss Clara Leet as faculty adviser, collected the library slips and filed them for every period in the day.

The Club showed its loyalty to the school by sponsoring a book drive last fall, which added about five hundred volumes to the library. At the present time, I was told that a fund had been started to provide the library with a linoleum floor covering. During the past year, a tiny silver excalibur with the initials R. T. on the blade had been chosen as the Club Emblem.

My interest in high school libraries had led me into the different high schools of the city, and I was pleased that I had found in West High a club that was attempting to increase the right spirit of the school.

Although the Debaters' Club did not produce another Demosthenes or a second Cicero, the club made numerous advances over previous years. During the fall term this organization sponsored not only the "Extemporaneous League," but also the "Discussion League" tryouts. An Auditorium was held in which the winner of the "Discussion League," Lillian Forus, gave her speech and in which the final eliminations were made for the "Extemporaneous League." In February both champions were sent to Macalester College. Several debates were held in which only members of the Debaters' Club participated. In the spring term a debate was held with Miss Souba's classes. At least one interscholastic debate will be held during the spring term.

We wish to thank all these students and faculty members who have so generously given their time and assistance, and especially our faculty adviser, Miss Orton.

The work done by the club is done outside of school time. It gives the girls opportunities to learn new crafts, and to accomplish things that they do not get around to do in class.

The West High Key Society was founded in June, 1921, by the Parents' and Teachers' Association of West High School, its purpose being to encourage and create enthusiasm for high ideals in scholarship at West. The membership consists of all honor students. During the past year, members of the December, 1922, class and members of the June, 1923, class have been initiated into the society. The emblem is a Greek key bearing a symbolic laurel wreath, upon which is the letter "W" in Old English text.

To "create, maintain, and extend throughout the school high standards of Christian character" should be the purpose of every student in school. The West Hi-Y Club has been working toward this end as a means of bettering existing undesirable conditions at West High.

The West club suffered a slump this year, but it has now completed a reorganization under the city constitution and is headed toward success.

Too much credit for the success of the organization this year cannot be given to "Bill" Chambers, the Y. M. C. A. leader, and also to Gilbert Mears. They have both worked with the interest of the club at heart and the fellows have responded wonderfully.

The West High Triangle Club with only three or four active members faced the difficulty of reorganization this fall. After some delay the club got started with regular meetings. James Landis of the West Lake Y. M. C. A. acted as "Y" leader and J. Harold Goldthorpe as faculty adviser. When once started the club grew to an enrolled membership of about twenty. Most of the meetings were held at the Central "Y," but some were held in the club rooms of the Judson Church. Many good speakers were obtained for the meetings.

The Triangle Club is similar to the Hi-Y Club but with a membership of freshmen and sophomore boys. It serves to prepare boys for later membership in the Hi-Y. Important devotional, school, and social problems are discussed by the members, or an outside speaker is obtained to furnish a talk. Any freshman or sophomore boy of good character is eligible for membership.

If these were the days of enchantresses, and if one could change oneself into an invisible creature, he would find it interesting to visit one of the meetings of the "W" Club. There he would find a group of lively girls about fourteen in number discussing athletic problems of the day under the able guidance of Miss Stevens, their faculty adviser. The meeting would be conducted in an orderly but not too formal style by Margaret Murray, the president of the club. Not all the discussion would be on the furtherance of girls' athletics, however; but some would pertain to the teas, sleigh-rides, and parties that the club would give. When the meeting adjourned, the hostess would serve refreshments. After refreshments, the girls would dance, and the girls as well as the invisible person would agree that they had spent a pleasant afternoon.

With these restrictions, it is able to produce better work, and enjoy friendly companionship which would otherwise be impossible.

The Kamera Klub devotes much of its time to Hesperian work, and co-operates with the Senior classes and the Hesperian Board in its endeavor to produce each year a bigger and better annual. Pictures are furnished to the Weekly occasionally, and the picture of the school used on the "Minneapolis Week" stamp was taken by one of our members.

Meetings are held alternate Tuesdays in Room 321. A short business session is followed by practice in the taking and developing of pictures. The club is greatly indebted to Miss Georgia Rees, its faculty adviser, whose constant effort does much to make the Kamera Klub a success.

The purpose of this club is to maintain fellowship between the athletic managers in West, improve conditions in the supply room, promote better athletics for West, and to help train new managers to fill the vacancies left by graduates.

The club meets regularly about once a month in a social way at the homes of the members. Three times a year new members are taken in, and initiation always proves a bit of diversion to all concerned.

At the beginning of the year nineteen twenty-three, there was no Mathematics Club at West; however, there were a number of trigonometry students who were interested in forming one. A constitution was drawn up, and, under the guidance of Mr. T. P. Gruwell, the club was reorganized near the end of the second term.

The club elects five directors, who act as the executives and are also the program committee which plans entertainments and meetings. From these, a chairman who presides at the meetings and a secretary-treasurer who handles the remainder of the business are elected. The present presiding officers are Walter Finke, chairman; Hugh Turrittin, secretary-treasurer; and Robert Cairns, Herbert King, and Lester Rowell the other members of the board. Mr. T. P. Gruwell is faculty adviser of the club.

Students who are taking higher algebra, solid geometry, or trigonometry are eligible to membership. The purpose of the club is to further the interest and pleasure of its members in mathematical subjects. For the future we plan to have special talks by reliable authorities on various mathematical subjects. We look forward to a successful year and hope, by showing the students the value of mathematics, to increase their interest in this study.

West High Cadet Company Officers

The West High Cadet Company has just finished a very successful year. Last June the annual cadet camp was held at Fort Snelling where the time was taken up by special military instruction and tactical hikes, and by practicing for the competitive drill, which was to decide which company should hold the colors for the next year. The West High company, under the leadership of Hans Ramm, won the colors.

Just before Christmas vacation the cadet companies gave a dance at Central. A great many of the cadets attended this, which was the first social event of the season.

This spring the company will drill on the athletic field. The first week in June the annual cadet camp will be conducted at Fort Snelling.

This may be the last year that the military drill will be offered in the Minneapolis High Schools. We hope that in this last year we may be a credit to our school.

In closing, the West High Cadet Company wishes to express its deep appreciation of Major McWade, whom we shall always hold as a sincere friend and as a man who has given up much of his time for our pleasure and benefit.

The aim of the West High School Parent-Teachers' Association for the current year has been two-fold: to increase the membership and to leave some tangible and lasting evidence of the year's work.

An intensive campaign was inaugurated to interest the parents in the organization to induce them to attend the monthly meetings and to become members. As a result, the membership has been more than trebled.

Over five hundred dollars has been accumulated which will be expended for equipment not ordinarily included in the school budget.

THEATRICALS

Of Matters Dramatic

Ofttimes, as one grows older, one loses the faculty to play. Exceptions prove the rule, it is said, although the logic of the statement is not clear, for according to that asseveration, the more exceptions, the truer the rule; therefore the best rule would cover but one instance. However, West High School is an exception; it has not lost the faculty to play; perhaps, because West never loses anything—it does gain some things it would like to lose.

"What did the faculty play?" "The Professor's Love Story." Naturally, as a school function, the play would be about a Professor or a Professoress, and the Professor is so much more popular: then, too, the female is said to be "deadly," and the desire was for something lively. Love Story, there was "the rub," to make it proper for "guides, philosophers, and friends" of youth to admit the existence of the tender passion, much more to simulate such feeling. To this end, the "faculty to play" selected as star, as shining head, a way-worn Benedict for the bachelor-professor, and for the married man a callow youth with mind still so wedded to tennis rackets, basketball, turning hand springs and such like joys, that when he heard marriage called an "honorable estate" he thought it meant lauded possessions—as sometimes indeed it does. The dual low-comedy love affair was also in the hands—no, hearts—of two most sedate and serious family men, and the saucy minx of their pursuit—well—the young lady was smart enough for the part. Of course, also, there needs must be a man of note(s) for one character; a pretty, sweet, young Miss (such are as plenty at West High as—as the plentiest thing you know) to balance the saucy Miss, for another; and two stately society dames to give an air of elegance; and last a Mrs. Whiffer. Thus propriety and perfection were assured.

Whose comedy is it? Originally, it was the work of Sir James Barrie, but after the cuttings-down, the addings-to, the new interpretations, the makings-over, the adjustments to time, place, and persons, Sir James would never recognize its glorified form: it is the supreme product of West High.

If a prophet is without honor in his own country, an actor will have little applause on his own stage, and in this case the actors had no stage on which to get even that little applause, so they borrowed the property of a kindly, courteous neighbor. That stage, henceforth, renowned shall be for the play of 1923. Like Sammy Weller's this pen runs to poetry, what pen wouldn't with such a theme as "The Professor's Love Story" after Sir James Barrie with the following cast?

The Mikado

"I smell a rat!" ejaculated Lord High Executioner Koko, with officious nose tangential to honorable wig of Katisha.

Audience snicker. Honorable performance of "Mikado," writed by Gilbert and Sullivan, is well under way, perpetrated by West High Glee Clubbers. "Aha," we snark, recognishing superior didoes of above seen Gleefuls. Yum-Yum crescends so high, dimuendo so low, ammito so delish. I grab honorable breath and hold. Most miraculous Nanki-Poo make loves dandy. Pooh-Bah, most honorable Groom of the Back Stairs, and Woman's Home Companion, etc., etc.; excruciate pompously. Most beneficial, so soulful it hurt. How Pish Tushes, Pitti-Sings, and Peep-Bos are gorgeous. Hypnotical costumes, I felt at my heart admirationing of them. So excitement.

"Loving Cup"

Some of Marion Latta's lines positively declared that the "men folks," namely: Clellan Card, Jack DeGroot, Philip Fairchild, Stuart March, and Paul Elmquist would not eat sponge cake at the picnic in the "Loving Cup." Perhaps they wouldn't in the play, but oh how the "men folks" made her lines false just as soon as the play was over. Miss Ulvin, the assistant coach, knows because she had three fingers broken grabbing for the cake that was used on the stage. Katherine Rutherford gave Frank Connell a "solid silver" loving cup that "Marge" Thompson claims to have bought. Upon close examination of the pawn record we find that the Thompsons report a theft of a family heirloom on the night of November 20. Ruth Keenan has positively decided to make birdology her life work since her wonderful experience of hunting birds on the auditorium stage.

"Florist Shop"

The cast of "The Florist Shop" was very well chosen except for one inconsistency, Roger Gurley buying orchids for two dollars a blossom. It is not the aim of the Dramatic Club to portray hyprocrisy, but as Gurley's character was not known, it is excusable.

The story shows him and Marjorie MacGregor, parties to one of these "over night romances," for at the opening of the play they have only been engaged for fifteen years. They are both saving up until Marjorie gets enough money so they can be married. Maxine Wilcox, as a romantic soul with a big heart and little education, plays "Romeo" to Marjorie in place of Gurley, much to the regret of Berkeley Leighton, the proprietor of the flower shop. Jealousy aroused in Roger's bosom brings about the termination of this short engagement. They were married and Gurley found a place where he can buy orchids for $1.75 apiece. No sales to Mr. Gurley are yet reported.

The way all the men characters found a way into the kitchen.

Florence Kelly's Irish brogue.

Helen Henryson's "If I had her here, I'd iron her out."

Jimmy Barrett's "Pass the olives please" (when there wasn't an olive in sight).

Gordy and Bob's dive out the window. (The stage hands forgot to catch Gordy.)

Zetta Goldberg's, "Where'll I scoot?" and the way she scooted.

Clark Craig's "Very good madam."

Bob McCoy's resemblance to an ideal Romeo.

The dinner scene with all the males in Tuxedoes.

Jimmy Barrett as a handy man around the kitchen with the dab of soot on his face that Florence so graciously gave him as a reward for his assistance.

The final close-up.

"The Admirable Crichton"

I once heard some one say (poor misguided creature) that high school plays were "hopelessly amateurish." However, he was forgiven, because as Earnest insisted he was not young enough to know everything.

It is sincerely hoped that this unfortunate person was present at the performance of the Admirable Crichton.

From the time the curtain went up to present to us Carman Doran as the perfect butler, Bill Crichton, who wants always to play the game, and Ernest, who is only Stuart March in disguise, imploring us to suppose that "we were all little fishes in the bottom of the sea," to the very end, there was not a moment ill spent.

As if being engaged to Lord Brocklehurst, alias Frank Connell, was not enough, poor Lady Mary (Effie Harrington masquerading) can't imagine anything more trying than to spend a whole morning trying on engagement rings. Before the first act was half over, we were all feeling very sorry, indeed, for Lady Mary and her two poor tired sisters, Agatha and Katherine, who were portrayed by Elydah Wheeler and Mary McCabe.

And Tweenie, poor uncultured, unconquerable, uncomfortable Tweenie! Maxine Wilcox was all of that and more too. Her giggle will long be remembered, not only by the audience, but by Miss Penney and the cast as well, for it caused many restless nights and troubled dreams. It is whispered that Maxine actually giggles in her sleep from so much practice.

Philip Fairchild, as the young minister, was excellent. Katherine always thought he'd make good.

As Lady Brocklehurst, who does everything for Brocky, Marian Latta was ideal, stately, inquisitive; but always getting just what she wanted. She made this part a tremendous success.

Lord Loam with his unforgetable proverb was a source of merriment to all. This delightfully eccentric old gentleman was played by Berkley Leighton.

Special note should be given to the Island Scene. It was splendidly done in spite of its difficulty. The persons in the play underwent a complete change. From London society people, they became mere castaways with Crichton their undisputed lord and master.

The principals of the cast were admirably supported by those playing minor parts. We had no idea that we had so many perfect servants in our midst.

The scenery was designed with the greatest care to suggest the atmosphere of the play. The rich hangings of the first and fourth acts made a fitting background for an English lord's home, and the island scenes were most picturesque.

The income from athletics for the year March 1, 1922, to March 1, 1923, has been $4,252.46. This is a decrease of $281.75 from the high mark of last year. The money has been received as follows: Football, $2,552.69; Basketball, $524.07; Green and White Day sales, $380.30; Baseball, $281.78; Hockey, $117.65; Track, $58.17; Tennis, $21.50; Lost Equipment, $63.70; and miscellaneous sources, such as Banquets, $252.60.

The necessary calls upon the athletic treasury are constantly growing. This is due to the increased cost of all equipment and the larger number of boys taking part in athletics each year. We are also in need of funds for the improvement of the athletic field. It is to be hoped that the next year will show an increase rather than a decrease in receipts, so that we may have sufficient funds to carry on the work to the best advantage.

Football

Many unforeseen things happened during the football season of 1923. The two teams who, on the pre-season dope were to finish at the bottom, came out on top, upsetting all the calculations of the experts. North and West were the two surprise packages. Of the two, West was, perhaps, the greater surprise.

With but three veterans to build a team around, "Batch" had a difficult task before him. With dogged patience and driving, he finally succeeded in building a team which came home with the coveted championship.

Although the school is proud of the fellows who were members of the championship team, still the fact cannot be overlooked that a great deal of the credit is due to our fighting coach, "Batch."

It was through his splendid efforts that West was brought out of the athletic rut to which she had sunk in the years during, and closely following, the war. We, the members of the 1923 football team, wish to thank him for the wonderful spirit which he instilled into us.

Football Review

H. E. BATCHELDER, COACH

In reviewing the 1922 football season one loses faith in pre-season dope. West was conceded no chance at all to develop a championship team. Presumably, the graduation of a dozen letter men, some of whom had been veterans for two or three years, had something to do with the prediction that West would not be a championship contender. The West football squad for several years has numbered around a hundred, many of whom are freshmen or sophomores. This squad is picked from a large number of candidates. The process of developing material is going on constantly, and there always has been a valuable man ready to step into the shoes of the veteran who plays his last game. Starting the season with but three veterans was not the handicap it seemed. With Captain Langford, who proved himself to be the headiest field general for several years, to lead the team; with Meili, an "All-City" tackle, and Prescott to steady the line; and with a promising crop of graduates from the second team, a coach could hardly ask for better prospects. Six men playing their first year of high school football made their letters.

CAPTAIN LANGFORD

The first practice game with Dunwoody resulted in a defeat for West 6-0. Every member of the first squad received a tryout. Captain Langford's injury in practice previous to this game was a severe blow. Much improvement was shown in the following game with Edison High, which West won 35-0. The development of the team up to this point was rapid, but additional injuries necessitated the rebuilding of the team. On top of Langford's injury, which kept him on the side lines for five weeks, Anderson, Mattern, Eidsvold, Altfillisch and Jacobsen suffered injuries which prevented their appearance against North in the opening game. The game with North was ragged as far as football was concerned, but spectators were never treated to a gamer exhibition, nor a fiercer brand of fight. The game ended 0-0. North should have won, but West would not be beaten. Meili's punt from behind his own goal line, after North was held by a few feet from scoring, was one of the features of the game. The ball was touched back behind North's goal line. In this determined stand Spahr suffered a broken collarbone.

CAPTAIN-ELECT MANS

West defeated Central the following week 12-6. By blocking a punt in the first few minutes of play, Bros recovered the ball, which he carried over for a touchdown. A forward pass, Zinn to Meili, netted another touchdown. Meili, receiving the ball in an open field, cleverly eluded the secondary defense, who had been completely fooled by the play.

The strong South team, doped to win the championship, fell before the aggressiveness of West by the score of 23-6. West, by blocking three punts in the first few minutes of play, scored a safety and a touchdown, demoralizing the South team, which could not find itself until late in the third quarter. On a well-executed pass, South scored its only touchdown of the game. Encouraged by its score, South started a march down the field which was not stopped until the team reached the thirty yard line. Here Cranston broke through the highly touted South line and blocked an attempted dropkick. Olson recovered the ball and scored West's second touchdown. A few seconds later Altfillisch broke through tackle and scored from the middle of the field. Farmiloe, to even up for his missed goal kicks, drop-kicked a goal from the forty yard line. The return to the game of the injured members strengthened the team fifty per cent. Langford's leadership was superb.

As in 1921, West played East for the championship. In 1921 West failed to cop its second consecutive championship. West did not forget that defeat. In 1922 East failed to cop its second consecutive championship, but she failed by twice the score which West had failed the previous year. It was a sweet revenge. West by her aggressiveness so unsteadied East's center that he passed over his backfield's head on the first play. West recovered the ball and on two cleverly executed plays pushed it over for a score in the first minute of play. East could hardly believe that this was West, the West whom they believed had no fight. In the last few minutes of play, Mattern broke through tackle and scored from the middle of the field. The game was won 14-0.

In conclusion, I wish to state that the 1922 football team was the scrappiest bunch I ever coached, and the keenest to take advantage of the breaks of the game. Too much credit cannot be given to a bunch who, in spite of the most disheartening obstacles, never gave up nor even thought of it. The sportsmanship trophy speaks for the type of men who represented West on this championship team, and for the kind of support which kept West at the front.

Track

To summarize the activities of a group of boys who worked untiringly in preparation for the few public appearances they had made in the Spring of 1922 is not particularly difficult, as they bear close resemblance to the performances of not a few Track teams that had helped to perpetuate the prestige so desirable in this or any other form of play.

Aside from the usual course of events there were two unusual exceptions. The National indoor track meet was held in March at Northwestern University, where Captain Rugg, the sole representative from West, won undying fame as the highest point winner of the meet. The other event consisted of a relay carnival at Hamline where West High won the half-mile relay and a few special events.

The success of this season, in my judgment, was largely due to the healthy character of the boys themselves, who worked faithfully and consistently during the entire year. Thomas Rugg, who captained the team for two successive seasons, finished his athletic career at West in a blaze of glory, having established several records that will be difficult for many an aspiring athlete to approach.

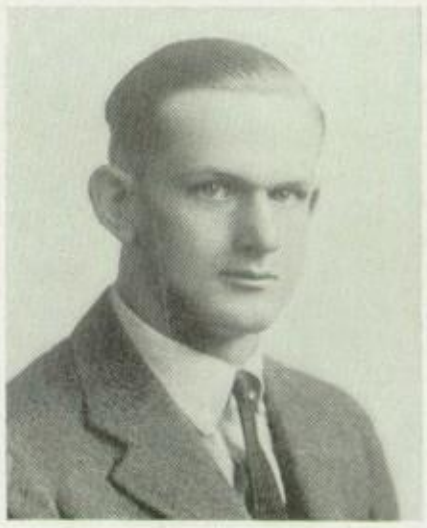
Track Review

LOUIS ZAVODSKY, COACH

Winning the Twin City Championship, and placing third in the Northwestern High School Track Meet, the 1922 Track Team may be considered a successful one. Captain Rugg, who closed his track career last year, was the high point winner of the season. In the only dual meet of the indoor schedule, Tommy scored twenty-eight points. West beat East in this meet, 49-45.

Because there were not enough gymnasiums in which to run them off, the other indoor meets were cancelled. In the Northwestern High School Track meet, Rugg placed fourth in the shot-put, and first in the high jump and pole vault, tying the pole vault record.

The first outdoor event of the season was the Hamline Relay. East captured high honors at this meet, the Green and White winning only the half mile. The following week West met East in a dual meet which proved to be a one-sided affair, West winning, 66-26½.



CAPTAIN RUGG

West continued its string of victories by taking the state meet by 58 points, East placed second with 26 points. In this meet, West proved that it had not only individual stars but a team that placed in every event.

For the fifth consecutive time West won high honors in the Carleton meet. The meet at Northfield produced the closest competition of the year, but West was not to be denied, and with Captain Rugg taking three first places, the Green and White team came home winner by a comfortable margin.

Six men closed their high school track careers in the Carleton meet. It was the last time that Rugg, Anderson, Bertram, Wiggins, Frost, and Baker donned their track suits for the Green and White. Rugg and Anderson took care of the field events; Bertram and Wiggins were the hurdlers; and Baker and Frost were the dash men.

CAPTAIN-ELECT CHAMPINE

West's Track Team has been considered by outsiders as a one man affair; but its success has been greatly aided by other strong track men. Marshall Frost shares the record for the 100-yard dash with McWhinney. Durward Anderson was one of the best all-around men West has ever had. Bertram, Wiggins, and Baker starred for West in their senior year. Besides these seniors, there were several men from among the juniors and sophomores who showed promise of becoming stars for the Green and White.

With the graduation of so many veterans, there is great demand for new material. If West is to retain honors on the track, the freshmen and sophomores must respond and do their share in making a winning team. Although West now has the enviable reputation of having captured all honors in this branch of athletics for several years, she must have a constant supply of new men for her teams if they are to continue to be winning ones.

The fact that West has not lost a City Meet for six years proves that her success is not due to individual ability but to collective effort. It also shows if West has a one man team that man is one whom she will not lose, we hope, for some time, Coach Louis Zavodsky.

Hockey

The hockey season of 1923 ought, it seems to me, to be considered an unqualified success; and when I say this, I am not thinking so much of games won as I am of other things which mean more to all true sportsmen than mere favorable scores. The boys hung up a splendid record, playing twelve scheduled and practice games, and winning all but one; they scored in their Minneapolis schedule twenty-nine times to their opponents' three times, and in all the games played, scored a total of forty points to their opponents' eleven. They won the undisputed Minneapolis championship and lost the Twin City championship by one point.

There are certain definite reasons why the 1923 hockey squad was able to establish a good record. The spirit of the squad was of the best throughout the season. Each man was doing his best to win for West, not merely to win fame for himself. A large squad was out the entire season, and to those men who were unable to win letters, but furnished the opposition for daily practices, belongs no small share of credit.

W. W. BRADLEY, Coach.

Hockey Review

W. W. BRADLEY, COACH

For the second consecutive year, West's hockey team went through the local season without a defeat, losing only the Twin City title.

Coach W. W. Bradley issued a call for all hockey candidates about December 1. Prospects were not encouraging, as only two veterans were back. Two weeks of hard practice in the girls' gymnasium found the squad in good condition to take the ice after Christmas vacation.

Central, our old rival, was defeated first by a score of 4-0, which seemed to be a standard score for the first part of the season. North was the next victim to fall before the West sextet. Led by Captain Sawyer and Eidsvold, the Green and White team counted four times, while Edwin Kane managed to keep West's goal clear. Edison was next on the list, and Coach Bradley's men turned the Wizards back by the same score of 4-0. West then took on the South team, the weakest in the city. The Orange and Black, by playing a six-man defense, kept the score down; but West managed to keep up the same average by tallying four times, while South was unable to score.

CAPTAIN SAWYER

West's backers were given a blow when Captain Sawyer was declared ineligible. It was largely through his work that West had come through the first round in such easy fashion, but when we met Central for the second time, West obtained a 3-1 victory, being scored against for the first time in the season. By 3-1 scores, the West team defeated both the Edison and North teams, assuring itself of the City Title by the latter victory.

CAPTAIN-ELECT CONWAY

The only defeat of the season came when Mechanic Arts of St. Paul and West clashed for the Twin City Title game. West started out in great shape by scoring three points to Mechanic Arts' two in the first half. Over-eagerness to add to their score lost the West team the championship. The St. Paul boys took advantage of the rather loose defensive work of the Green and White team and scored two goals. The season ended with the game against South, when West came out on the long end of a 4-0 score.

Graduation claims its share of the members of the Hockey team. Langford, Moorhead, Gurley, and Parker are all to be lost. Langford's fighting spirit enabled the Green and White team to win many of its games. Moorhead, although injured in a practice game at the start of the season, came back strong and played nice hockey throughout the year. Roger Gurley, who made his appearance in only a few games toward the close of the season, undoubtedly would have proved more valuable if he had started playing earlier. An error on the eligibility list kept Gurley out of the first games. Parker, a substitute, displayed a nice brand of hockey whenever he had the chance.

Coach Bradley has great prospects for another winning team next year. Captain John Conway, who is equally as good on defense as on offense, together with Eddie Kane, should make a strong defense. Eidsvold, Sawyer and Warren will be back to advance the puck up the ice, and with these prsopects, West should have little trouble defending herself upon the ice.

Because last year's squad was so thoroughly depleted by graduation it was necessary to institute a somewhat new style of play this year, and to build practically a new team. In doing this it was further necessary to shift several men from their regular positions to other positions new to them; such a change as this is almost always a serious handicap to the players at least; but in this instance it has worked out very satisfactorily.

Of this year's team, four men, Captain Jacobsen, Bill Meili, McGlashan, and Booth will be lost through graduation. Captain-elect Innes, Pelton, Mans, Beckett, and Harvey will return next year.

To the sport writer, I have left the task of reviewing the season and making individual comment, but I should like to say that I have never worked with a finer squad of men, nor have I ever enjoyed the association more thoroughly. I wish also to pay tribute to those men who comprise what is known as the second-stringers. Without them, the teams would not have been possible.

HAMILTON CUMMINS, Coach.

Basket-Ball Review

HAMILTON CUMMINS, COACH

When Coach Hamilton Cummins called basket-ball practice just after football season, "Bill" Meili was the only seasoned veteran West had; and he and Captain "Bob" Jacobsen, who had seen some service the preceding year, formed the nucleus of a team which placed fourth in the city.

The team was greatly strengthened by two men new to the school. Paul Mans came to West from Dunwoody as a sophomore in the fall, and made his letter in football and basket-ball, proving a valuable asset in both sports. Don Innes, who formerly played for Ames, Iowa, proved to be one of the best men West had. His accuracy in free throws gave West many needed points. He will be back next year as Captain.

The schedule this year, a double round of fourteen, was the longest ever played in the city high schools; West came through fourth, winning seven of the fourteen.

CAPTAIN JACOBSEN

The results of the first round are as follows: Central 25, West 9; Edison 16, West 19; East 15, West 27; Vocational 13, West 25; Roosevelt 17, West 30; South 31, West 13; North 7, West 10.

At the half-way mark, West had won five games out of seven, and had been defeated only by Central and South, the strong rivals for the title.

The second round brought five more defeats for West. The results follow: Central 24, West 8; Edison 25, West 18; East 20, West 13; Vocational 12, West 38; Roosevelt 18, West 22; South 25, West 24.

CAPTAIN-ELECT INNES

The South game set a world's record for basket-ball when the teams played four extra periods. It was considered one of the best games ever played in high school circles, and it was only after four extra quarters of tight playing that either team could make good its chance to win. A free throw finally gave South the game.

The slump into which the team fell in the middle of the season probably cost West one or two games, but it had little effect on the final standings. The inexperienced West team was matched against teams of veterans who had been playing together; and although they put up a good fight they could not compete with the South and Central teams. Their showing against the other teams of the city was entirely satisfactory, and surpassed the expectations of most of the fans.

Judging from the number of games won, the season would not seem to be very successful; however this should not be the only determining factor. If a team has learned to accept defeat rather than to sacrifice sportsmanship, it has learned the lesson that athletics should teach. The 1923 Basket Ball Team was coached by a man who realized this. The fine spirit of the team is in itself a great credit to the school.

Captain Jacobsen, "Bill" Meili, Clinton McGlashan, and Kenneth Booth are graduating this year, leaving a fairly substantial squad for next year. Captain-elect Innes, Mans, and Pelton, with several others of the squad may be depended upon to bring more honor to the Green and White next year.

Immediately following the basketball season, the first baseball call was issued, and eighty candidates reported. Owing to bad weather conditions, the first two weeks of practice were confined to the gymnasium, with the pitchers and catchers working out each evening. The first two weeks of outdoor practice were spent in cutting down the squad of eighty to forty, and a month later to twenty-five members, who were kept during the entire season.

The past high school baseball season was very successful, and a good brand of ball was played, many games being decided by one point. East won the championship, going through the season without a defeat. North finished second, and West third. Two of our players, "Wally" Remington and Warren Olson, were placed on the all-city team.

Graduation claimed both Captain Donald Quimby and Wallace Remington, each of whom played four years on the baseball team. The season marked the close of their splendid high school athletic careers. Olness and Clough, both dependable players, were also lost through graduation.

Baseball Review

L. W. CHAMBERLAIN, COACH

Having one of the strongest teams in the high school league, the 1922 baseball team finished in third place. Bad baseball in the crucial moments cost West the championship. Had West received the advantage of the many breaks that accompany a close game, the result of the season might have been different; however, a team must take the breaks as they come and win on superior ball playing.

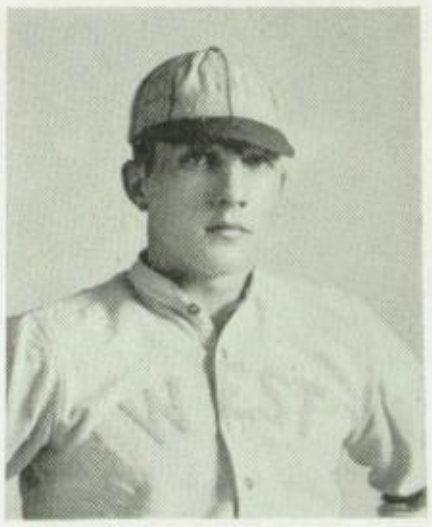
In the initial contest of the season West won a hard fought game against South by the score of 16 to 14. West's heavy hitting gave our men an advantage over the Orange and Black which determined the result of this closely contested batting session.

West lost the second game to North by the close score of 11 to 12. This was a poor exhibition of baseball, both teams made many errors.

Bad fielding in the pinches gave East the best of a pitcher's duel between Langford and Guzy, each pitcher being credited with fourteen strike-outs. It was in this game that Langford first showed his merit as a pitcher; the game ended 1-4 in favor of the Cardinals.

At the half way mark, West had a five hundred per cent average by beating Central in a well-played game which ended 9-4.

The second round opened against South. As in the first game, West had little trouble in hitting South's strongest pitchers, and pounded out eleven runs while the Orange and Black were able to score only three times. Eidsvold's splendid delivery was largely responsible for the outcome of the game.



CAPTAIN QUIMBY

CAPTAIN-ELECT MEILI

In the first game ever played on the West athletic field, the Green and White lost a very close game to East by the score of 4-5. Fumbling at the crucial moments cost West the game.

West met Central on a day that was fit more for a swimming meet than a baseball game. Clean handling of the ball was impossible, and the game finally ended when Nicollet Park became flooded. The Red and Blue won by a score of 6-5. The poor condition of the field was responsible for the erratic playing which was outstanding throughout the game.

The second game with North ended in a disputed tie

when Warren Olson stole home. The last inning was ordered to be re-played. Coach Chamberlain's men ended the argument in the twelfth inning by scoring the needed tally. The loss of this game put North out of the running and gave East the undisputed title.

The season, although disappointing to many fans, brought out much good playing. The pitching of George Langford was especially commendable. The addition of "Lanky" to the pitching staff released Remington from the mound, so that he was able to resume his regular position at short stop for the rest of the season. The loss of Rex Lawson at first base left a gap on the right side of the infield which was never filled satisfactorily throughout the season.

The North game closed the athletic careers of "Wally" Remington, Captain "Don" Quimby, and Jack Olness, all valuable men. Captain Quimby and Remington had both played four years of baseball for West and are a great loss to the team.

Cross-Country

This cross-country season was very successful from many standpoints. The men on the team trained and practiced faithfully for many weeks before the first meet. This kind of faithful work resulted in West's placing third in the list. All the men fought for each place and gave everything they had to put West in the lead. The very close scores in the meets that were lost show how hard they fought.

The prospects for a team next year are fairly good. Several men who won cross-country letters this year will be back next season.

There is one spirit which helps all teams to win championships which was noticeably lacking this season. The school spirit ought to follow a team in a concrete form. It may be that cross-country is losing favor in the high schools of the city, and if this is true something very radical must happen to keep it as a major sport in West.

Let's get behind all the teams next season and see how many championships West can capture next year.

Cross-Country Review

The West High School Cross-Country Team of 1922 opened their season with a defeat at the hands of her traditional rival, Central. This set-back, however, did not dampen the courage and the pluck of a dozen boys who, under the able leadership of Wellington Feidt, proved more than a match for other teams, with the exception of South, who was allowed to escape with a meet and the City Championship, by a narrow score margin of one point.

Even though they failed to win supreme honors in all the contests, these boys deserve every respect for their unselfish and strenuous efforts to represent honorably and loyally their school in this none too popular sport of the fall season. The outlook for next season is not exceptionally encouraging. Captain Feidt, Gerald Warrington, and Gael Rogers, all men of ability, are lost through graduation, which will place the burden of representing West in this sport on the shoulders of the lower classmen.

Swimming

The results of the swimming season this year have been very satisfactory, considering material at hand and the late start in the season. The first dual meet with Hamline University resulted in a victory 47-20 with West claiming six of the eight first places.

The next dual meet with St. Paul Central, resulted in West's losing by the score of 46 to 21. The West swimmers redeemed themselves in a return meet by winning over Central 35 to 33. The efforts of the West relay team consisting of Crocker, Dunlap, Lucke, and Newhouse clinched this meet. In the meet with Minneapolis Central, West met defeat, 45 to 15.

West tied the meet with Mechanic Arts of St. Paul, 34 to 34, but with a decision in their favor in a protested event; they claimed the meet 35 to 34.

In the Twin City Interscholastic Meet, the last and most important of the season, West placed second among the six schools entered; Aygarn and Brackett in the 100-yard breast stroke, Lucke in the dashes, Kane in the diving, and the relay team were the high point winners. In this meet the West relay team consisting of Lucke, Kane, Newhouse, and Dunlap, the latter two swimming their last event for West, placed second.

With eight of the ten letter men back, West ought to have a strong team for next year's swimming season.

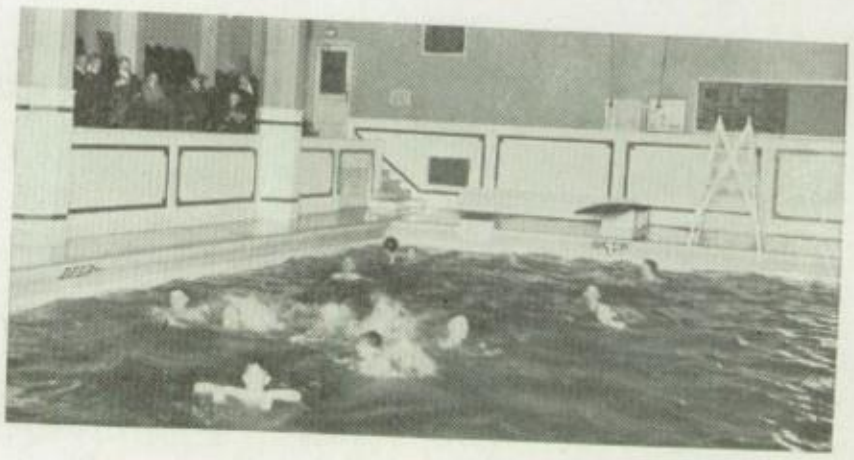
CAPTAIN DUNLAP



Swimming Review

Although the team won but two meets, the members of the squad feel that the season has been a successful one. A swimming team is greatly handicapped when it has no individual stars. West had no such men, but had an evenly balanced team.

In the first meet with St. Paul Central, West received a severe beating, the score being 47 to 21. In the return meet a few weeks later, West, greatly improved, came back and defeated them. This meet and the Hamline meet were the only ones that the West team won. In the Northwestern meet, "Eddy" Kane placed second in the fancy diving contest, and the relay team won third place.

Next year's team should be a fairly strong one. Kane, Lucke, Witt, Crocker, Furber, Wilkinson, Brackett, and Harris will form the nucleus of the team.

Tennis

Although the West Tennis team did not win the championship, the season may be counted a success. The prospects for the season were not bright since there was not one letter man back. However, the semi-annual tournament developed a team which fought its way to second place in a race of some of the best high school teams in years. The team suffered its only defeat of the season in the championship match with Central by a score of three matches to two.

The West doubles team, composed of Crandall and Davidson, accomplished a noteworthy performance by going through the entire season without being defeated.

Good play throughout the season was hampered by a lack of favorable weather conditions. Many matches during the season were played on very cold and windy days.

Of the team, composed of Crandall, Davidson, and Rowe, only the latter is lost for next season. Other men, such as Conway and Smith showed up well in the school tournament. With such a nucleus, the outlook for next year is exceedingly cheerful.

Tennis Review

The Fall Tennis Team had a very successful season, placing second only to Central in the final standings. Practically every school entered teams, and there was a great deal of close competition. West lost to Central by a score of three matches to two. The school tournament was hotly contested, and after the regular tournament, the men had to play off two challenges, which resulted in many changes. The team finally selected consisted of Crandall, Davidson, Rowe, and Greenleaf; later in the season, Smith was called on to play. Letters were issued at the close of the season to the first three named. Tennis prospects for a championship team are bright, with a number of good men out.

Much praise is due to Mr. D. O. Smith, the coach, through whose efforts the team was able to make the fine showing that it did. The team wishes to express its gratitude for the keen interest he has shown in the sport.

Golf

Fifty-nine golf candidates turned out for fall practice under the supervision of L. W. Chamberlain. Practice was slow in getting under way, because John N. Granner who was coach during the preceding spring did not return to school.

In the elimination contest, many close matches were played, and in several instances the contestants had to play extra holes to determine the winner. The team that was finally selected to represent West consisted of Bauer, Nye, and Jacobs. Upton, Soderberg, and Rosenstein alternated as the fourth man.

The Green and White team could compete in only two of the many meets scheduled because of the bad weather conditions. West won the first from North, 4-0, but lost to East.

Although the season could scarcely be called successful, the fact that there were so many candidates out for the team snows a growing interest in golf as an inter-scholastic sport, and speaks well for West's future in this game.

Second Football Team

Primarily and fundamentally, a second team, or rather a second squad, is maintained to aid in the development of the first team. Obviously, a second team will be consistently weaker than the first team, unless there is something wrong with the Varsity coach and his selection of men.

After considerable dickering T. P. Gruwell succeeded in arranging several games. The West seconds opened the season against the Dunwoody reserve. Although this was the football debut for most of the team, Dunwoody failed to threaten West's goal, and was forced to play defensively throughout the game, while West totaled twenty-one points and left its goal line uncrossed.

Against Vocational High the next week, West played better ball, displayed a stronger defense and a much more varied attack. Again the seconds kept their goal line not only uncrossed but unthreatened and piled up twenty-eight points.

On the Thursday following they met North, who had in previous games evidenced considerable strength. Throughout the entire first half the substitutes of the seconds held North on even terms. At the beginning of the second half, the regulars replaced the reserves and, as in the other games, forced the Blue and White to assume the defensive. During the remaining minutes the West team pushed over a touchdown, kept the North team constantly on North territory, and was halted on its march toward another touchdown by the final whistle.

Most of the men will be back next year and should be strong candidates for the Varsity.

Freshman Basket-Ball

Despite the lack of a regular place to practice, the 1923 Freshman BasketBall Team may be considered a success from all angles. The season uncovered much promising material for the future Green and White teams within the next three years. Although West won but three games, the fact that these came toward the end of the season proved conclusively that the members of the team had learned the value of team play.

Coach L. W. Chamberlain at the first of the season was confronted with the problem of picking a team from about thirty candidates, the majority of them having had little, if any, previous experience with the game. With the gym available only two days of the week and then for only an hour, the coach set to work drilling the team in the fundamentals of the game. After the Christmas vacation, the squad was cut to fifteen members.

The first round showed that the West men lacked the ability to shoot baskets. Their floor work was good, but time and again the ball would be worked down the floor only to be lost.

In the second round, the Frosh team came to life and defeated both South and East, the Cardinal quint being the runner-up to Central, the City Champions.

The Girls' Athletic Association is an organization the object of which is to promote girls' athletics at West. That it is a live group is shown by the increasing number of members. Last year 630 girls were members and this year 654 are members.

The Association has sponsored during the year swimming, skating, an indoor track meet, inter-class tennis, baseball, and volleyball tournaments. Excellence in these sports enables girls to win their class numerals, then a "W," and the highest honor, a silver loving cup.

One of the chief interests of the organization now is the obtaining of inter-scholastic athletics for girls. Tennis is already an accomplished fact. A further step was made when a picked team from Central played West's all-school team in volleyball. In another year we hope that besides tennis and volleyball, we shall be able to test our strength with other schools in all sports.

Volleyball

This year's tournament was the most exciting one ever staged at West. The teams on the whole displayed a better brand of ball and showed more pep and enthusiasm than usual. At practice each team played well and it was rather hard to tell what class would come out ahead. Some of the experts had it doped out that the Juniors would again cop the championship.

At the end of the first round the Juniors were in the lead, with the Seniors close behind. The most thrilling game of the season was between the old rivals, the Juniors and the Seniors. It was really a remarkable game because of the girls' ability in handling the ball quickly and accurately. The final count was 15-14 in favor of the Seniors. This made the two teams tied for first place, with the Freshmen and "Sophs" in second and third respectively. This tie was played off at the end of the second round. The result was that the Juniors won the championship by emerging victorious in the last game.

Each team had its captain: Seniors, Ethel Teagle; Juniors, Margaret Farwell; Sophomores, Ruth Snyder; Freshmen, Anna McDonell.

Volleyball is rapidly becoming a popular sport among the West High girls.

Hiking

Simultaneously with the departure of Old Jack Frost and the arrival of spring, large troops of West High girls hit the lake trails.

The tramps were jolly affairs. The world was so fresh and fair and there was so much to be talked over that the old hikemeter which had been in service since 1917, when the first West hikers appeared, ticked off the long miles in a surprisingly short time. The preliminary 3 and 5 mile hikes, the 4 and 6 mile, and the last 8 mile hikes were checked off in a few weeks' time. Fifty points gained! Thirty-two miles and not a blister!

And then the roads were deserted during the long summer vacation. The birds singing their gayest tunes, the wild flowers blooming in pretty abandon, the roads more inviting than ever, looked in vain for the laughing girls.

But in the fall, when the wayside was a splash of vivid color, the girls again came into view and the same little journeys were taken along the familiar roads.

When the season closed 125 of the happy crowd, after 64 miles in the company of Good Fellowship and of Good Health, had earned their numerals in this delightful manner.

Skating

Skating is just coming into its own. Gradually it has become more popular, until it is one of the leading sports among the West girls. The reason for this is that now they can obtain their six afternoons in skating as well as any other sport. Spending this length of time on the ice should make them more experienced on skates. It is little wonder then that they are more interested in earning their numeral in skating now than before.

The different events that they had to accomplish in order to win a numeral included sculling forward and backward, plain skating forward and backward, cutting the ice, the Dutch roll, the heel-toe turn, etc. The girls were particularly fortunate this year in having Leslie Hopper the chairman of skating, for she is a very accomplished skater and was able to show them how to overcome any difficulties that they might have. Perhaps it is for this reason that so many girls have won their numerals this year compared to other years. In 1920, Florence Tenney was the only girl to win a numeral ,while at least ten girls won theirs this year.

In concluding, I might say that skating is, without a doubt, the coolest sport offered at West.

Track

There was to be a Girls' Track Meet, that fact had been well advertised. Considered by the participants a great event but of no real importance to the school, was the attitude, I discovered, taken by most of our classmates. Consequently, my anticipations were not very high. But, when I entered the gymnasium that afternoon, I found to my surprise and secret satisfaction that the West High students, including myself, were wrong, dead wrong.

The cheering crowd of spectators, mothers and friends urging on their favorites; the girls racing with Old Father Time and beating him to the tape; these same young women defying the laws of gravity by jumping amazing heights and by heaving the balls and shotput extraordinary distances; the smashing of old records, and the establishing of new ones; the thrills, the suspense, the uncertainty, the enthusiasm—all contributed to the developing of an honest-to-goodness track meet and to the making of it the most successful one we have had in our school's history of girls' athletics.

Girls, yours is a worthy accomplishment for you not only won the City Championship, but you proved that if given the chance, West High girls can make good in interscholastic athletics.

Swimming

In a very short time swimming has become a splashing success among the athletic girls of West High.

On May 16 a water tryout was held at the Y. W. C. A. pool. The would-be mermaids must have forgotten their skill after the long winter, because only Katherine and Elizabeth Scott won their points.

After the swimming meet on December 7, eight of the dripping crowd were very happy, for they had won their numerals. That same day several veterans and a few of the new numeral holders tried for extra points. The rest, who were not so fortunate, did not allow their enthusiasm to be dampened, but vowed to win their prize next time.

In former years the girls chalked up extra points by doing fancy dives, various strokes, and unusual stunts. Now, however, the second numeral can be won only by doing the breaks, holds and carries of life-saving. As the position of life-saver has always been claimed as a man's job and privilege, you can never tell what may come from the girls' invasion in this field.

Tennis

Twenty-five of West's future Lenglens and Mallorys responded to the 1922 call of the racquet and the net. Pep was the password and Spizzerinktum was the slogan! Mightily did they achieve!

Through their superiority of footwork, the accuracy with which they served the ball, entitled Florence Tenney, Bernice Davidson, and Helen Bender ultimately to defend the honor of West on the tennis courts in the interscholastic tournament.

Our three representatives battled their way within reaching distance of the championship in the most fiercely contested of all interscholastic games. They battled until eliminated through sheer exhaustion, all but Bernice Davidson, whose pluck carried the colors of West gloriously through the semi-finals. A serve with the speed of a bullet, a return as swiftly as sent, again across the net, and then a return high and slow—heart-breakingly just beyond her reach! Lady Luck scorned West that day. The breaks were all against her team, and the shame of it was that no team was more deserving of victory than the 1922 team.

Baseball

The 1922 season was very successful in that it brought to light a great many new stars. As usual, in the spring there were many girls that turned out for baseball. There was a wealth of good material and, consequently, the teams were better than usual. The one drawback on the Junior team was the lack of an experienced pitcher. It was, perhaps, for this reason that the Juniors lost all claim to the championship.

The "Sophs" were fortunate in having a number of equally good pitchers. That was why they were able to defeat all their opponents, and chiefly the Senior team. This team for three consecutive years had walked away with the inter-class championship and was expected to do the same this year. However, the tables were turned and the "Sophs" were the victors. The Freshmen had a good all-around team, but lacked confidence in themselves.

The girls' gymnasium, in addition to being small, has a very low ceiling and is, therefore, a poor place for baseball games. For a long time the girls have lived in anticipation of playing out-of-doors, and when West acquired her athletic field their hope seemed about to be realized. This year their ideal is a reality.

How to Earn a "W"

FRANCES N. CUSHING

So many girls have come to me inquiring as to how they might obtain their school letter that I decided to use this means of informing them.

Requirements for a "W" are six hundred points out of a possible fifteen hundred earned in the various sports. These required points toward a "W" may be won in two years in the same activity, except in swimming and skating.

An individual loving cup is awarded to the girl winning these six hundred points required for a "W" and an additional four hundred points.

One can earn these points by participating in the following activities: Indoor Baseball, Folk Dancing, Gymnastics, Hiking, Skating, Swimming, Tennis, and Track.

A class numeral is awarded for the first one hundred points earned in one sport. For each additional hundred points a letter indicating the activity is placed in the corner of the numeral. If one has less than one hundred points, she can apply them toward the total for a letter.

A girl competing for honors must have a passing grade in at least three subjects.

To win one hundred points in baseball or volleyball, one must make the class team and play four out of the six games in the class tournament.

In gymnastics a numeral is awarded to any girl acting as squad leader for one year and proving her ability by leading a class in marching, in free work, in games, and in folk dancing.

To win a numeral in hiking, one must walk 32 miles a term for two consecutive terms. Each hike is not less than four or more than eight miles in length. In skating and swimming a numeral is awarded to the girl who executes the prescribed events. In tennis there is a school tournament and an interscholastic tournament. The girls who participate in the finals in the school and interscholastic tournaments are awarded numerals. To win a numeral in track, a girl must take part in the final meet and win two firsts and one third or two seconds and one first.

Each year the wearing of a "W" is becoming more common in West High. More girls are interested in earning this coveted letter, and this year twelve of them have obtained their "W's." Four girls have worked so hard and unceasingly that they have attained the highest honor that any Minneapolis High School can bestow upon girls in athletics—the individual loving cup.

FRANCES N. CUSHING, Physical Director.

Cup Winners

DORIS CLARK

In one year Doris won her loving cup, in addition to completing the necessary points for her "W."

KATHRYN HAVEN

As a fitting climax to Katie's athletic career at West, she has obtained her coveted cup. She is proficient in all sports and an "all around" girl.

ALICE POWERS

Although she has won the highest honors, that of a cup, "Al" is still very active in the field of sports.

ETHEL TEAGLE

"Tiggie," always a star in track, won this year's meet, in which she broke several of her own records. She holds the city record for the broad jump and the dash.

"W" Winners

HELEN BENDER

"Molla's" skill and speed on the taped courts earned for her a position on the tennis team. She is proficient also in baseball and swimming.

DORIS CLARK

"Riz" was the star server on the champ's volley ball team and could be relied upon for extra points. Her successes on the cinder path and the baseball diamond were innumerable.

KATHERINE FEIDT

"Katie" is a valuable asset to any volleyball team. Her long and trusty right arm returns the balls before they top the net. Track is also one of her specialties.

CHARLOTTE FOSBERG

Good in every sport, but particularly capable in baseball, is "Mike's" reputation. She is noted for her home runs and remarkable catching ability.

"W" Winners

LESLIE HOPPER

"Les" is a celebrity in her lines. She is so skillful that no one dares to challenge her title as our champion skater.

MARION JONES

All of a sudden Marion decided to win her felt. This she did by making her class team in volleyball and baseball. She also proved her worth in swimming and skating.

MARGARET KELLY

It would be difficult to tell in which sport "Mugs" excels. She went out for every team and made good on all of them.

MARGUERITE LENTNER

Our little lightning fiend finds time now and then to hold down first base on the championship baseball team. This time it is again a case of quality and not quantity.

"W" Winners

BERNICE LARSON

"Bee" got started rather late in earning her "W." She deserves a great deal of credit for her hard and consistent work.

MILDRED MCDONELL

"Millie," an all around athlete, starred in every branch of sport. Her skill as a pitcher made her team formidable and aided them materially in winning the championship.

PEARL POMMER

By steady and unceasing work, Pearl won her letter. Volleyball seems to be her long suit, for it is in this sport that she shines.

ELDORA RICKEY

Last, but not least. Eldora first distinguished herself by winning first honors in the 1922 girls' track meet. She placed first in high jump, in dash, and in broad jump.

Sugar or Salt?—Romance or Realism

Do you believe that the medicine of life is always better if taken in sugar-coated tablets?

Isn't it providential that this constant thread of romance is to be found in the most unexpected places?

(Sigh, gentle reader, and read on!)

The train came roaring into the little station of Rice, and stopped only long enough to admit an aged couple smothered under rice, old shoes, and laughter. The town seemed well named.

Then the train started, and the happy pair came into the car. There was a huge sign, "Just Married," pinned to the back of the little lady's cape. I, of course, became interested and did the impolite thing. I stared! I noticed that our lady was small with silvery hair, sparkling eyes and pink cheeks. The man seemed as straight as a boy, at least till he had been on the train a few hours—he crumpled up slightly later on. His kindly face was shining, and the brightness seemed reflected in his neat black suit.

It was queer, but after traveling for a few hours they did not stop being interested in each other enough to look at the scenery or the people of the car. Yes, it did seem odd that an old couple could be so wrapped up in each other.

I guess they must call that the sugar of life,—for them but not for me.

Another time at a bank I was waiting for a return check, or something of the sort, when I noticed through the bars of the cashier's office, a young man telephoning. A sweet young girl came up to him, looked around (she didn't see me), lifted her palm, and twisted a small gold band around (I guess she wanted a better one), as immediately afterwards she put her hand into his and smiled and smiled at him—Oh, you Romance!

Then, of all of the embarrassing things, she looked up—at me. I was gaping through the bars, mouth, eyes, and ears open.

Again I had observed the sugar of life—for them; not for me!

But there are other times when I have observed without being observed. Often as I am doing my lessons, I will watch the living picture that the young couple next door make in the window.

One time, I saw a stuffed davenport, shaded lights, and flickering shadows, caused by the fire. I heard children's laughter, or weeping overhead as they were most likely being put to bed.

Best of all I saw the young father and mother on the davenport trying to be interested in an "Atlantic Monthly" but yet not being able to keep their eyes off one another.

Then alas, or was it alas? A hairpin had fallen from her hair and a little curl dropped to her shoulder. Of course, it must have looked like golden taffy to him as he immediately began to pull at it. The poor old "Atlantic Monthly" fell unheeded to the floor and was left alone.

That must be another case of the sugar of life—for them; not for me!

Sugar may sound inappropriate but salt—salt sounds so practical.

Maybe that is'nt all in life, though.

I have seen business women who seem cheerful enough and contented; I have seen teachers who are seemingly happy; I have seen nurses who seem contented.

I wonder who can tell what that life is—sugar or salt?

April's such a fickle maid;
Filled with sunshine laced with shade,
Now in laughter, now in tears,
Fleeing swift from winter fears;
With bright'ning eyes and brighter glances,
Summer's promise in her dances;
Now she runs, and now she lingers,
Caressing leaf buds with her fingers,
Now she frowns and frets and weeps,
Shrinking when the soft breeze sweeps
Her robes; and then with quick'ning laugh,
Flits to search another path.

The Bookkeeper on Friendship

I've often wondered what friendship is,
Since the time that I first heard the term.
I've been pondering hard, and applying the word
To the folks that I know in the firm.

There's the guy who'll blow in with a whole lot of pep,
And he'll drag you up town to a show,
And he'll tell you you're stale, and are needing a change,
As you sit in the twentieth row!

Now that sort's all right when you're sad an' you're blue,
But when you're broke, or beginning to bend,
Will he kick in with a smile on his map
And, "Pay back when you can—to your friend?"

Once on my pony I rode o'er the plain,
Or through hot bottoms choked with chapparal,
Or up the side of some sky piercing butte * * *
The copper sky, with its white sun,
The waving grasses, touched with gray,
The cooling breeze, the crystal air,
And even sand beneath my pony's feet,
Set my heart singing with the meadow larks.
At length I rode up a steep slope,
Which steeper grew, and I dismounting, led
My partner steed through maze of brown mesquite,
And over, round, between, and under rocks,
Footing my way o'er shale and sliding sand,
Yet ever upwards. And at last I and my horse
Came out upon the summit! God! What I saw there!
North, East, South, West,
The same expanse of scorching sand and rocks,
Nor yet the same, for here a green, cool spot
Where bees hang lazy o'er the isolated spring,
And there a bold, bluff butte, its deep-scarred walls
Cleft in the center with a Canyon deep,
Parting the mesa into lone, twin peaks,
Rugged, yet cedared, and pleasing in their aspect,
Yet tragic with the tale of how a band
Of hardy pioneers here lost their lives;
Died with the redskin's rifles flashing from
Below, their own sending the age-long
Message, "We yield not, but die!"

And as I gazed—
Low in the west sank that bright desert sun
Which is seen nowhere else, and o'er the sage,
From nearby brush to purple distant haze,
Spread a weird light, a golden touch.
I stood on a high rock and saw the world,
It seemed, spread out below, all tinged
With that ethereal light, and breathless I
Did see as in a daze the light to fade,
And gray supplant the gold, when on a sudden
The sun went down like thunder, and the spell was broken.

But I—I waved my hat above my head,
And cried aloud, "Hurrah for God!"

But now 'tis gone! The losing of it!
Ah, we who lose the greatest thing in life,
And that forever, cry to thee, O God of Nature,
To avenge the crime!

DUSTIN ADAMS.

And They Called it Boston

I was wandering about the old city,
Around me were ancestral buildings,
Old buildings, historical, memorial,
Shrines of a nation's fathers—
Monuments.

Monuments to bravery, freedom, liberty.
Here they lived, those grand old men of yore—
Lived, and living, worked, toiled, bled—
Fought and bled for a hope, a dream,—an ideal.
'Tis not the same place I saw
But a moment before; nay,
For no longer is it dull, drab,—old—
It pulsates with life, a nation's life!
I thrilled to the life in it—
Expectancy, hope of a re-acting of that drama
Before my eyes,—I saw it!—
An idol, a dream, hope—despair—then joy!
A nation's birth.

I walked beyond, and in the midst of the city,
Dignified, severe, at rest they lay.
Did they know of the success they had started?
—In the heart of the city, at peace, lay
These soldiers.

What was the motive, what the incentive
For those deeds of valor, lauded to the skies?
A tyrant's hands, binding, drawing, cutting,
A brave heart, a freedom loving soul,—
And THAT!

I gazed heavenward, to that symbol of their courage.
Red, white, and blue it shone against the sky.
For that they fought, and bled, and died,
And now were at their peace.
For that!

My eyes were bright, tear-dimmed, but bright.
I thought of what it meant to die like that.
My head was high,—I walked on air—forgetful—
Then—I slipped—a Boston puddle—
Darn illusions!

M. J. Deinard.

How The Manuscript Was Written

The original morsel: Under the spreading chestnut tree,
The village smithy stands—etc.

Then as ASIA, THE AMERICAN, LIFE, HARPER'S, LITERARY DIGEST, SMART SET, and LADIES HOME JOURNAL, would have it.

ASIA— As we arrived in the village of KHES-NUTT our party (which consisted of 8 dragomen, 3 flivvers, 1 bath tub, 1 titled Englishwoman, and 6 Americans with Harvard accents and Swedish movements, one Pierce Arrow) was duly presented to the great chief, Smit-Tee, a powerful brawny savage. He was unusually gracious and exhibited for our delection his uncanny power as an arrow shot. Human targets were used. In token of our appreciation we gave him the Pierce Arrow.

AMERICAN— Bill Smith, village blacksmith, of Anvil, Ohio, has the lowest blood pressure of any man in seven counties. "I never eat anything except the things I like," he affirmed modestly to the author of this article. "To this lifelong habit I attribute my splendid health," he continued. "In fact, when I was a boy I ate green apples, hot dogs, stolen watermelons, and noodles. I well remember * * * " etc.

LIFE— He: You dance like the village blacksmith in action.
She: Well, they are just playing The Anvil Chorus!

HARPER'S— In the dim twilight of an uneventful day, the little village of Sleep—On stretched and yawned before the vision of the sinewy blacksmith. He had the soul of a poet.

"Tranquil as a baby's dream," he said half to himself and half to the horse shoe he was holding as he munched a dried prune.

Then caressing the switching tale of Old Nell (time 40:18) he whispered in a macabre tone, "This is the end!"

LITERARY DIGEST— The Midnight Howler: Fame comes to Mr. K. Nut Smith, Congressman from Spreading, N. C. who has introduced a bill before the house to put a horse shoe as a mascot and good luck charm on the hood of every Ford in the country.

The Appendicitis Pain: Congressman from Spreading, N. C., gives new bill a perfectly correct introduction to the house.

SMART SET—"Well?" she coruscated and gazed at his handiwork—the platinum horseshoe.

"Yes," he admitted. His brawny arms were bare and the veins stood out like angle worms.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"Go on!" he burbled.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"I can't pay you," she hissed. "The editors won't let me!"

LADIES HOME JOURNAL— To meet her father, a quaint old man who puttered about in the village blacksmith shop with a feather duster, Dorothy sped on. She carried a mug of cocoa-cola in one hand and a lemon pie in the other. It was papa's lunch. No happiness was in her heart, however, as it hit her ribs with terrific force beneath a dress of moire crepe plaited in plaits with an orange felt collar and a cast iron girdle. No, indeed. She had started the whole day wrong. So she returned home and donned a crepe-de-chene blouse trimmed with liquid veneer and a checked shirt. Her heart now beat with normal accents.

Such is the power and psychology of dress.

Judge

Whenever you start to criticize,
Think how you stand in other's eyes.
Put your "kicker" on a shelf;
Don't judge others by yourself.

NOEL DEUTSCH.

Hope

It's the streak of light before dawning,
It's the glimpse of the moon through the shade;
It's the sound of a heart faintly throbbing,
It's the promise that lies in the maid.

It's the first drop of rain in the desert,
It's the first whiff of breeze in a calm;
It's the first shooting stalk in the grimy dirt,
That reaching grows into the palm.

It's the promise that sometime hereafter,
The two souls that passed in the night;
Shall meet and fill time with their laughter,
Meet and fill space with delight.

Feature Board

For the benefit of the numerous unsuccessful candidates for the Board, we print below the winners, and the qualifications that raised them to the Board level:

CHAMPINE, MURRAY
Does NOT like Shredded Wheat. Claims that he once visited Central. Jazz-bo Tie, honorary men's fraternity. Golosh enthusiast, '21.

CONNELL, FRANK
Invented joke about, "Where does your lap go when you stand up?" '20. Repeated it '21, '22.

CLEAVELAND, ELIZABETH
Horrible mention '20, '21, '22, '23.

MCGLASHAN, CLINTON
Anaesthetic dancer '21. Pollyanna Club, Treasurer. Uses Ivory (see above picture).

WILCOX, MAXINE
Alias, Yumping Yimminy. Winner Kutie Kontest '23.

WEBER, JOHN
Talked to twelve girls simultaneously, April 3, beating record previously held by Fairchild, thus qualifying for the Board.

CRANSTON, ATWOOD BUTTERCUP
Runner-up Flaxie Frizzle Contest, beaten by Prescott by one wave length.

DEGROOT, JACK
Motto: "Me fatal beauty is me life-long coise." Chief claim to fame, he once attended Central.

MEILI, WILLYUM
Personal friend of every ham sandwich in Shebat's. Holds national jumping rope record, 24:03 flat (feet). Jazz-bo Tie. Close second to Wilcox in Kutie Kontest.

These worthies served as inspiration to Wilcox and Cleaveland, who shadowed them for over eleven years recording all wit and wisdom that fell from between their pearly teeth.

Looking Backward

In days of yore, the custom was to prophesy the future. We, however, are going to tell you something of what has gone before. Turn back the curtain of time with us and dip into the past.

Russell Zinn is completing his first love letter. It is to the little Irish girl who pinches him in kindergarten every day.

Of all the games he knows, "Ring Around the Rosy" is Bobby Jacobsen's favorite. Bobby prefers Mary Carpenter as a partner " 'cause she always pulls him up so nice."

Here we see Mary Baker, alias Chasin' Jasin. Mary earned her sobriquet at a very tender age by dressing up as an Indian, and frightening all the nice little girls in the neighborhood half to death.

At present Billy Nebeltheau is somewhat subdued. He has been spanked three times in one week for persistently annoying the family. Bill insists on playing with his little drum all hours of the night and day.

Willy Meili's mother is worried about her little son's health. Willy has just learned to read, and is spending all his play time pouring over "The Little Red Hen."

Ever since a week ago when he went to Sunday School for the first time, Georgie Langford has been trying to find out why the minister says "Oh Min" after every prayer. Every day now Georgie plays Sunday School and drops his birthday pennies into mama's big glass fish bowl.

Maxine Wilcox, at the age of two years, has astonished the dramatic world by her artistic rendition of "Little Bo Peep." It is expected that her extraordinary talents will revolutionize the stage.

Alfred Moorhead is royally indifferent to the fact that he is looked upon as the sheik of the nursey. He even ignores pretty little Mary McCabe who gazes with childish adoration at his pink cheeks and long black curls.

The tyrant of the nursery, Billy Prescott, believes that the king can do no wrong. He has just seized poor little Roger Gurley's brand new choo-choo train, utterly oblivious to that young gentleman's vociferous protests.

Tiny Gracie McDonald has just discovered that life's worth living after all. Big Brother painted his canoe yesterday, and Gracie finds that the pretty yellow paint changes the color of her hair to a most delightful hue.

Little Helen Hall is being punished by having to stand in the corner with her face to the wall. Helen stuck out her tongue at her teacher, and absolutely refused to play Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C Sharp Minor.

Roly-poly Clinton McGlashan's mother has just discovered that the beefsteak that she was planning on for dinner went with Clinton and his little friend, Donald Murray, on their last excursion to the Pirate's Den in the vacant lot.

Tiny Katy Haven's feelings were cruelly lacerated in kindergarten today. Katy's aunt has just bought her a brand new red raincape just like Red Riding Hood's, and teacher hard-heartedly refused to allow her to wear it during school.

Margaret Pratt has just cut her pretty curls so she can play football with the little boy next door. Margaret is going to glue them on again if daddy objects.

Jean Richardson and little Marge Poehler walked home from school today with Somebody; it didn't matter that he was on the other side of the street.

They All Fail

(A little departure from the mechanical romance of other stories)

Scene: Almost anywhere
Time: Right now
Characters: "Never Fail" Jim, the hero
Adviser
Beautiful young lady.

Scene I (and only one)

Jim: My what a fierce day! All snowey and freezing cold and only June, too! (Cry from the dark) "Oh, help!"
Jim: What is that?
Cry: Help! Help!
Jim: Some one must be calling for help. (Author's note: We must waste a bit of time) As they do in the movies.
Cry: Help! Help! Help! Help!
Jim: I will not fail you or my name is not "Never Fail Jim."
Cry: Help!
Jim dives into lake nearby.

Jim: You are saved!

Lady: Ah, thank you, kind sir.

Jim: Oh, that's all right. I love to save pretty young girls.

(Exit Beautiful Young Lady.)

Jim: O, gee! I hate to go to school today. But here I am so I might as well go in.

(Jim goes in the school and sleeps through two periods and then goes to advisory.)

Adv.: Today we give out the fail slips.

Jim: (aside) Ye Gods!

Adv.: James, you have yours, come with me!

(Advisor and Jim exeunt in the general direction of the office.)

Thus our little play has fulfilled its purpose. Thus Never Fail Jim, the hero, has failed!

Moral: What's in a name? Nothing!

Thus comes the end. (Curtain.)

Finis.

The Hesperian Epic

Listen and hear me while I try to sing
Of the trip of Aeneas, the bold Trojan king.
Aeneas had been through a long cold hard reign,
And he needed a rest for his gout and his brain;
So his trustworthy swords, and his age-rusted wards,
His triremes and biremes,—aquatical Fords,
He lined up on the shore and prepared to set sail,
And told the post-master to forward his mail
To the Hesperian land, a place of great fame
Of which he had learned in a book of that name.

But the signals got mixed as they sailed away;
Palinurus, the pilot, had soon lost his way,
And got caught, while sailing Hesperian water,
In a peach of a storm sent by Saturn's dire daughter.
The biremes grew tri-remes; the tri's multiplied:
Each ship was all rent on top, bottom, and side.
The sea consumed sailors, and they consumed sea—
Neither taste nor appearance was flat, you can see.
Then Neptune or Pluto (some god of the water)
Raised his ire and his head to see what was the matter.

A storm raged without, and one raged within;
But old Plute appeased both with his raging and din.
Then our heroes proceeded their wearisome way,
And stopped at grand Carthage a while to stay;
There Dido spread banquets and filled them up full.
While Cupid shot arrows, bold Aeny shot bull.
Both marksmen were skilfull and both made a hit;
Queen Dido on Aen's beefy booty had bit.
But Aeny was out on a vacation trip,
And so, early one morning, he gave her the slip.

A broken heart would not kill her dead,
So she jumped in a burning brush-pile instead,
While one flame sailed away, many more licked her head;
Ere the Trojans were far, darling Dido was dead.
So he builded himself a Hesperian town,
And married a wife of Hesperian renown.

Aeneas's gout was just about cured,
Of a quiet life, he was fairly assured.
So our Hero retired with slippers and pipe,
And read the newspapers from morning till night.
While Lavinia, his wife, mended socks and washed dishes,
Aeny sat by the Tiber a-fishing for fishes.
Their progeny live in th' Hesperian land,
And have built them a nation majestic and grand.

Absolutely All-Star Casts

If "All the world is a stage," as Shakespeare says, wouldn't you like to see these characters dramatize these plays?

"Lightning"
- Thunder: Berkeley Leighton
- Hail: Johnny Weber
- Spring Showers: Ruth Keenan

"Her Tragic Moment"
- The Alarm Clock: Baby Ben
- The Heroine: Lovey Jones
- Cruel Teacher: Miss Heffernan

"Held by the Enemy"
- Senior Boy: Atwood Cranston
- The Enemy: Mr. Richardson

"Prisoner of Gender"
- He: Phil. Fairchild
- She: Mary McCabe
- It: Tony (Phil's Ford)

"Blood and Sand"
- Rubarb: Dick Kerr
- Senorita: Charlotte Parker

"The Lion and the Mouse"
- Lion: Bill Meili
- Mouse: Babe Hoey

"Come Out of the Kitchen"
- Stove: Florence Kelley
- Ice-box: Elizabeth Lusk
- Sink: Robert McCoy

"To Have and to Hold"
- Time: June, 1923.
- Place: West High Auditorium.
- Characters: Lucky Seniors.
- Finis: Presentation of diplomas.
- At last! "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD"

At Our Crowded Auditoriums ∽ On The Shelf.

How To Make a Radio:

Take a dry cell, or a cross section of any Senior's brain, a buzzer or Atwood Cranston, and a switch, Batch's preferred. Take two terminals like the two front doors. For a ground, the new athletic field will do, and for high pressure, Clark Newhouse will do. For a vacuum tube, use Walter Bauer.

These We Have With Us Always

(A collection of inmates photographed in their natural poses)

John Smith is a hard one, we fear,
(He wears these clothes to make it quite clear)
He uses slang
With a practical twang,
For he's hard you know, or at least, so we hear.

Minnie Malone goes in for the Russian.
She claims she's cynical—there's no discussion.
We hope she'll emerge
From her cosmic urge
Before she and it have a concussion.

Frederick Q. Dumm never got over seas
For his marks always hover around in the D's.
But tho he's supine,
His profile's divine,
So what does he care—he's quite the bee's sneeze.

Annie Halifax is her name;
She won't deny she yearns for fame.
"In the movies," says she,
"As we snicker tee hee,
With the Halifax talent I'll prove my claim."

Here's Susabella Sappy;
She sure is keen and snappy—
Chicago, Frisco, Prep School glide,
When she does 'em, run and hide
For you can't do them half as well as Susabella Sappy.

Reginald Eustace—there's more of it, too,
Confesses he really doesn't know what to do,
He's consented to pose—
A fly's tickling his nose—
So Reggie, dear is in a ter-i-ble stew.

JORDAN AUTOMOBILES

Those admirable men and women to whom wealth is no novelty and good taste is inherent, are wisely choosing the economical and enduring new Jordan to replace old-fashioned heavy cars of days gone by.

Balance is the dominant characteristics of this remarkable Jordan. It hugs the road---it's easy movement forward.

Thousands of Jordan owners were attracted by the distinctive beauty of the car.

They were next gratified by its performance---its silent operation---its fine appointments.

But it required years of association with the sincerely built automobile to reveal to them its remarkable endurance and day after day service.

Youth and the Spring Modes Meet
In Atkinson's Misses and Children's Shop

To make selections easy tor the mothers who know what they want for their school-girl daughters, to intelligently advise the mothers who seek advice, to reconcile the frivolous ideas ot youth with the practical demands of parents, to be lavish in assortments and prudent in price. That is the theory which governs Atkinson's Misses and Children Shop.

Environment---

Henry Conover '24

The great majority of people allow themselves to be controled by their environment. All are influenced by it to a greater or lesser degree.

When you are enrolled in our classes, you become associated throughout the day with ambitious, energetic young men and women — the kind of contact that is constant spur toward great accomplishment.

Our courses prepare you for splendid opportunities in the bank or office. They give you a foundation for all commercial work. The more fully you are qualified for efficient service the more readily you will find desirable openings.
